

September 30, 2008

Dear all,

We are in the clean air business.

We have great assets, we have great values and we have a great company. Thanks to all of you for your great contribution today. Once again you have embodied our corporate values: reliability, local presence, customer satisfaction, commitment, team work.

Today, sustainability is a dominating debate in our society.
And we cannot afford to take this challenge lightly.

I am personally convinced that to maintain our leadership position we have to handle the sustainability challenge. It is key to our success and to our business growth.

The goal I want Camfil Farr to achieve is to be recognised as a sustainable leader in the air filtration industry, by our customers, our partners and the market where we compete.

In order to do so, my first commitment is to provide resources, i.e. financial and human resources.

Camfil Farr will pursue 2 sustainable objectives by the end of Q2 2009:

- An environmental report and action plan per CF facility.
- A Corporate sustainability report

At the end of the day, business success is all about people and how we act, and how we are perceived to act. So it is up to all of us all to make this happen. I look forward to a bright and sustainable future together with you all.

Again, we are in the business of clean air. And yes, we do care.

Alan O'Connell
President and CEO, Camfil Farr Group